Regional economic development is arguably the most useful framework within which to address issues of job creation, infrastructure, real estate development, housing, taxation, fiscal capacity, and zoning. The Certificate Program offers evening classes taught by a mix of distinguished practitioners and Saint Louis University faculty. It challenges those involved in the public sector to expand their knowledge and skills in critical areas with special attention given to development in the current economic landscape.

"The Certificate Program in Economic Development was terrific! For the first time in my public career, a learning forum was presented on eight linked topics concerning economic development. Presentations were insightful, challenging and candid. An array of presenters and forum participants gave a wide and diverse view of the topics. Value takeaways for sure!"
